The United States Golf Association has been conducting national championships since 1895, when the inaugural U.S. Open, U.S. Amateur and U.S. Women’s Amateur were contested. In 2014, the USGA will conduct 13 national championships, highlighted by the U.S. Open and U.S. Women’s Open at Pinehurst Resort & Country Club’s No. 2 course in North Carolina, as well as the final U.S. Amateur Public Links and U.S. Women’s Amateur Public Links Championships. The USGA will also conduct qualifying for the first U.S. Amateur Four-Ball and U.S. Women’s Amateur Four-Ball Championships, which will offer two-person teams the opportunity to compete for a national title.
